What is Magazines for Libraries™?

Magazines for Libraries™ is a well-respected and objective source of full-text, title-level reviews about electronic and print serials, e-journal databases, abstracting and indexing sources, Open Access and niche publications, and other periodicals. Since 1969, Magazines for Libraries has been reviewing the best publications for all serials collections—the general reader and school, junior college, college, university, and public libraries. ProQuest publishes an annual print edition of Magazines for Libraries and makes the reviews available online through Ulrichsweb.

Who writes the Magazines for Libraries reviews?

Each of the more than 6,000 full-text reviews in Magazines for Libraries is written by a professional librarian with subject expertise. Each review contains a critical assessment of a title's scope and value. These in-depth evaluations help librarians learn what is relevant and notable for library collections. Titles in more than 200 subject areas and disciplines are covered. Cheryl LaGuardia, Research Librarian at the Widener Library, Harvard University, and e-Reviewer for Library Journal, is the current editor of Magazines for Libraries.

Are reviews available for journals as well as magazines?

Yes. In addition to magazines, reviews cover journals, bulletins, trade publications, databases, abstracting and indexing sources, Open Access titles, and other periodicals from small, large, and niche publishers.

Australian and New Zealand Journal of Criminology and Justice Studies (ANZSJS) is a quarterly journal dedicated to advancing research and debate on a range of criminological and interdisciplinary work in the field of crime and criminal justice. As one would expect, the journal frequently opens with an editor's introduction, and each issue contains six to eight peer-reviewed research articles, and text access is available through Sage.
